Our Alternatives

The great American weakness for seeing things either as white or black, all good or all bad, is asserting itself early in discussion of post-war probabilities.

The same goofy impulse which makes us want to think that when the war is over everything will be either a Utopia of gadgets, prosperity and unlimited opportunity for all, or a dreary ordeal of unemployment, chaos and hopelessness is insinuating itself into our national preoccupation with international relations.

Indeed, that preoccupation itself is a manifestation of goofiness, because it frequently starts with the assumption that international affairs now have become so important that national affairs no longer are of primary importance and somehow will take care of themselves if only the post-war boundaries of Poland are patched up properly and an equitable voting formula can be found for the United Nations Security Council.

We are drifting into the same muddle-headed error that made so many of us believe after World War I that America and the world were confronted with a clear choice between war and peace and that if we chose peace, therefore war would be eliminated. And once more, we are becoming involved in little technicalities and narrow particularisms, to the exclusion of general principles and wide realities.

Insofar as alternatives do exist and are subject to free choice, the United States can decide only whether to participate in the available means of cooperative security, or to hold aloof; it has made that decision. Its participation now is assured.

Cooperative security is, of course, only a hope. It never has been attained and only rarely has been approached. Perhaps it will not be attained this time. That possibility invites the cynics to proclaim loudly that the whole thing is a delusion. Meanwhile, the dreamers at the other extreme are busy with nonsense about an ideal world of peace and goodwill in which all fears may be safely forgotten—the same fallacy of false security which betrayed the United States after 1918.

Somewhere between the extremes of too much hope and too much despair, too much perfection and too many flaws, lie the terms of security for the United States and like-minded nations. There will be no easy, clear-cut choices between black and white, but there should be—there must be—an everlasting search for the happy medium between extremes, the exact mixture of reality and idealism, perfection and fault which can make security a fact.

One Good Heave

Prime Minister Churchill, not a man given to over-optimistic statements, said during his visit to the western front this week that "one good heave" by the Allies on both front would end the war in Europe. Events are confirming his judgment.

With the western Allies across the Rhine at some places and poised to carry forward a major attack on the whole area east of the river, and with Russia's attack in the east picking up momentum again, Germany's days as a fighting power are closely numbered.

The war in Europe has reached the stage it was wishfully supposed to have reached last fall—where a collapse of organized resistance could occur at any time. The collapse did not occur last fall because the Allies could not deliver the knockout blow. It will occur this spring because they can deliver it. That is the difference.

That is the import of Mr. Churchill's optimism. It is the import of the recent optimism of the Russians and of the unexpressed optimism of Americans. Germany's last natural defenses now lie behind the Allies. The knockout may take days, weeks, or months, but with the Allies swarming over Germany from two directions, the military issue has been decided.

In the days immediately ahead, events will follow each other so rapidly that details of the closing action of the war will be lost in the confusion. Inside Germany itself, chaos must already be the general order. The Nazis seem determined to drag down the German nation with them as they fall, but if that is the retribution they want they will get it. These are the days which millions of Germany's enemies have worked ceaselessly to reach—the days of ultimate triumph in a war against seemingly impossible odds.

Proportionate Casualties

While there is no way to condone casualties, the Army and Navy totals up to the beginning of this month suggest the wisdom of thinking of them as proportionate statistics.

For example, out of a total of 176,798 deaths since the beginning of the war, it is sound actuarial practice to subtract upward of 10,000 as representing the death rate per 10,000,000 men between the ages of 20 and 35 who would have died in civil life. It is proper, moreover, to be aware of the fact that casualties in World War I for two-thirds of a year of actual hostilities were 365,000 as against the March 1 total of 823,632 after 39 months of hostilities. In World War I, moreover, more soldiers died from disease than from battle wounds.

Of total casualties to date in this war, about one in five represents a death, with three in five representing wounded. About 8 per cent are prisoners and 13 per cent are missing. Many of the missing, of course, ultimately will be presumed dead.

In proportion to Russia and Great Britain, American casualties are still light, reflecting the American military policy of saving men by expenditure of armament and munitions. The price we pay is heavy, but it is not out of proportion to the defeat that was averted and the victory being gained.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, March 11.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds auguries of sudden and surprising events, in which much excitement, stirring around, perhaps radical upheavals, may be anticipated. Adventure, drama, thrills, all of far-reaching and breathtaking importance, are indicated. Under such exceptional stimuli, it is likely that the emotions, impulses and inclinations may need a firm hand of restraint lest danger and regret negative possible happiness and benefits. Romance looms large.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of surprising upheavals, travel, adventure, romance and all sorts of thrilling and unforeseen experiences. The young and romantic are particularly involved, but it would be unwise and regrettable to be carried away by the sensations, emotions and impulses, and lack sensible and considered judgment. Keep the rules and codes for safety.

A child born on this day will have talent and originality, with much independence of character, inciting it to an adventurous and progressive life.

For Monday, March 12.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and productive day, in which important issues come up for decisive and concrete action, with final disposition having to do with future safety, security and enduring comforts and satisfactions. Shrewd, clever, perhaps spectacular or utopian ideas may be the mainspring of such action, bound to attract hearty support from those in high places. Romance and felicitous home and social relations find firm footing.

Those whose birthday it is find themselves with prospects of placing their affairs and possessions on a sound and enduring foundation by the removal of some static or crystallized condition long obstructing and discouraging. It is probable really brilliant, intuitional, spectacular or shrewd ideas or tactics are destined to win support from influential persons, ready to recognize real worth and with corresponding rewards. This security and stability will find happy and expansive reactions on the love and domestic life. Work for permanence.

A child born on this day will have much sound ability and character assisting it to responsibility and enduring success in life.

If your little boy wants to become a lawyer don't be discouraged. Think of the money he'll save not having to hire a lawyer.

What this country needs is a girl's complexion that will look good on a young man's coat lapel.

Conference Looms On Manpower Bills

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Two widely varying plans to get the most efficient use from the nation's civilian manpower headed today toward a senate-house conference.

The senate bill calls for cooperation among management, labor and government in channeling workers where they are needed most. But the War Manpower commission would have power to tell any employer how many people he could work, and forbid him from hiring any over that ceiling.

Employers who refused to stay in line would be subject to a year in jail or $10,000 fine.

The house bill is a straight work-fight-or-go-to-jail bill. Local draft boards could instruct men of 18 to 45 to keep their present jobs, or take more essential tasks. Those who refused would be subject to induction, five years imprisonment or $10,000 fine.

Navy Sill Has Jap Outposts To Attack

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Multiple, powerful blows against Japanese outposts before any homeland invasion shaped up today as the Navy's likely course of Pacific action.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, at a news conference late yesterday, said the Navy "is strong to go anywhere in the Pacific it wants to go."

"It might even be possible to seize a position" on the Japanese homeland, he added, "but it would be difficult to keep such a position supplied" without a "broader base" than now available.

Nimitz told newsmen: "Every move we make we make with plenty of force, and we propose to continue until we are sure the remainder of the Japanese fleet is no longer a threat."

Freed In Soviet Drive

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Second Lt. John Kadar, Congo, O., was among the American prisoners of war reported liberated by Soviet armies, the War department announced.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Types of Anemias and Treatment

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

A PERSON who does not have enough coloring matter in the blood, or who has too few red blood cells is said to be suffering from anemia. An anemic person is often pale, tired easily, has a poor appetite and loses weight.

There are different types of anemia. One large group is called microcytic hypochromic anemia. Microcytic means that the cells are smaller than normal, and hypochromic means that they contain less than the usual amount of coloring matter.

These anemias may result from a deficiency of iron in the diet, but may also come from continued bleeding or from infections. The treatment is, of course, to find the cause, if possible, to eliminate it and to administer iron in some form.

One of the usual preparations is iron and ammonium citrate. Some physicians also like to give vitamin C with the iron. There is some doubt as to whether or not the vitamin C has any particular effect in such cases, unless the patient's diet is greatly deficient in this vitamin, which is supplied in liberal amounts in orange juice, grapefruit juice, lemon juice and some raw vegetables.

Another group of anemias is known as macrocytic anemias. In this condition, the blood cells are larger than normal and may or may not be lacking in coloring matter. The number of cells, however, is reduced.

The most common form of this anemia is called pernicious anemia, and it is apparently due to the lack of a certain substance called the antianemic principle. The disorder is usually diagnosed by an examination of the blood cells under the microscope. The symptoms consist of loss of weight and strength, a lemon-yellow color to the skin, perhaps shortness of breath and some digestive upsets. In practically all instances, the amount of acid in the stomach is greatly reduced or completely absent.

In treating pernicious anemia liver extract is the one preparation which is necessary. The treatment must be continuous. It would appear that the best method of administering the extract is by injection into a muscle. From time to time, the patient's blood should be examined. If there is evidence that the condition is recurring, further injections of the liver extract are indicated.

Pernicious anemia, then, is not a curable disease, but it is one which can be completely controlled when liver extract is properly employed. If the patient's symptoms are quite severe, a blood transfusion may be employed. This, of course, gives only temporary relief, and is used together with the liver extract.

No amount of praise is too great for the deeds rendered by YOUR RED CROSS. Mrs. Smith hadn't heard from Johnny in three months—the RED CROSS located her son. Death's BRIGHT DIAMONDS

by Lionel Mosher

THE STORY: Nick Trent, Army pilot, has been buzz-bombed out of the war. On the boat home a mysterious stranger named Booker makes him a vague money-proposition which he turns down. Pat Hudson and Charley Strand, old friends, greet him at the dock. While Nick is waiting for Charley later that afternoon in the lobby of the Parker House, Booker reappears, introduces him to exotic Magda Calavestra. On parting, Calavestra presses something into his hands and whispers "Tonight." Nick has dinner with the Hudsons. The doorbell rings and Pat says she expects Eric.

IV
Ever since I had known Eric Woolf, I had been convinced that he never made a move without calculating precisely where it would land him on the scale of his own personal aggrandizement.

As he entered the room, I saw that his close-cropped blonde hair had been bleached almost white by the sun. He was smiling, but his eyes were the palest and coldest of blues.

"Well, Trent," Woolf put out his hand. "How are you?"
"I'm all right," I said.

"You had a lovely lady worried," he rubbed his hands and glanced at Pat.

"He's not supposed to know that," answered Pat dryly.
"But, of course," Woolf helped himself to a cigarette from the box on the table. "You know, you were in all the papers, Trent."

"Was I?"
"Un-hm—headlines, too. Boston aviator wounded. Former Harvard athlete, hero of 30 missions over Germany, hit by rocket-bomb." He laughed lightly. "Quite a disturbance."

"It was not very funny," I said.
"Really?" He was still smiling. "Then they are quite effective—the robots?"

"One of them, well-placed," I said, "can kill at least a hundred women and children."

"The women and children," Eric said, "that is regrettable. But in total war—that happens."

"There's nothing like viewing a thing with Olympian detachment," I said.

Eric sat there, immaculate and fit in his Oxford gray suit with the pencil stripe.

"How is your father, Miss Pat?" he asked.

"Grumpy," said Pat. "He thinks the world is going to pot."

"What is it," asked Eric, "the war or his health?"

"Neither," Pat replied bluntly. "It's money."

"Is there something possibly I could do?" Eric asked.

"Heavens, no!" Pat laughed. "Thank you, Eric, but it's not so bad as that."

Pat flushed. She glanced at me and I turned to look at Eric curiously. Was he really wealthy? I said.

"What are you doing now, Eric?" "Nothing," he replied. "However, I am dicker with the O. W. I. for a place on their foreign language broadcasts. I have an idea for a program calculated to regain the confidence of the German people in us."

"Have you any ideas as to how we can regain confidence in the German people?" I said.

"Did you go to the game this afternoon, Eric?" Pat asked, apparently determined to keep the conversation light and harmless.

"No, Miss Pat. I find football dull. I took a walk along the waterfront. Eric's eyes grew speculative. "They have removed all restrictions. One can go practically anywhere."

"Things have changed considerably in the past two years," I said.

"Yes," he admitted. "They would not believe me in Germany if I told them that there is not a single barrage balloon over Boston or New York harbors."

"Don't tell them," Pat laughed lightly. Woolf glanced at her. There was a silence. Then Eric said to me:

"You have a discharge button?" His eyes ran over the lapel of my coat.

"Not yet."

"You'd better have one. It may save you embarrassment." He took out a cigarette. "By the way, what was the trouble?"

"Trouble?" I asked evenly.

"Yes," he lit a cigarette and blew the smoke through his nostrils. "The reason for your discharge."

"He was wounded, Eric," Pat said. "By the rocket bomb. Don't you remember?"

"He looks pretty fit to me," Eric said.

Chicago Police Find Man Nailed To Cross; Cult Is Suspected

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, March 10—A man, about 40 years old, was found by Hudson avenue police Friday nailed to a 10-foot cross, with 10-penny spikes through his hands. His feet bound with rope and a crudely entwined mass of thorny bushes on his head.

The police, responding to a report of an automobile accident, found the man unconscious on the heavy cross, which was fastened to part of an elevated railway pillar on the near North Side.

The victim was taken to St. Joseph's hospital but physicians did not immediately remove the nails from his hands.

Capt. Patrick O'Connell said the man, identified as Fred Walscher, was not wearing a coat or hat and his clothing was not disarranged.

Regaining consciousness several hours later, Walscher told Capt. O'Connell that he was summoned from his apartment by a knock on the window and asked to assist at an automobile accident. He said when he arrived at the scene of the alleged accident a man threatened him with a gun and forced him to lie down on the cross.

Capt. O'Connell said police were working on the theory that Walscher might have been the victim of a religious cult. He cited a paper found in the victim's pocket which read: "This good man is chosen sacrifice by the noblest, finest inspiration for world peace. Let's all follow for the good of all mankind by the unknown world controllers."

Dr. Paul San Filippo said Walscher's condition was satisfactory. There were two wounds, one in each palm, and a slight laceration on the left breast, the doctor said.

Tell of Damage To Farm Lands By Strip Mining

WASHINGTON, March 10—A story of ruined farm lands and scarred landscapes as a result of strip mining operations in 15 states was heard today by a house committee with a request for $50,000 to study reclamation possibilities.

Reps. Thom (D., Ohio) and Lewis (R., Ohio), backing the request before an agricultural appropriations subcommittee, said the problem is acute in Ohio.

Alan N. Jordan, executive secretary of the Ohio Valley Conservation and Flood Control congress, urged an immediate study by the Forest service.

LEAVES FROM A WAR CORRESPONDENT'S NOTEBOOK

by Hal Boyle

WITH AMERICAN NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY—Adolf Hitler looks more and more like his old pal Benito Mussolini as the American army marches through the industrially rich Rhineland.

It is not so much that the German army has been compelled to retreat. It has retreated before—then recoiled to strike smashing blows. It is not even that this time the Wehrmacht is retreating in considerable disorder. It has brought order out of chaos before—notably after the disastrous and costly withdrawal from Normandy and Brittany.

But never before in modern times has a German leader had to take a drubbing of this kind on the home grounds. The reaction is much the same as it was in Sicily when Benito's faithful were being bounced back.

The heart for war had gone out of the Italian people. And the heart for war is almost dead now in those areas of Germany which have come within range of Eisenhower's artillery.

Other Similarities
Aside from the increasing servility of the German civilians who hardly bother to conceal their relief that the nightmare of war is over there are two similarities to Mussolini's grandiose stand in Sicily which compel the observer to believe Hitler is on the toboggan with his own people.

First, there are the slogans painted on every wall to stir the Herren-volk's jaded patriotism.

"What have you done for the fatherland today," they ask. Others say "one people, one fatherland, one leader" and others deliver an Poland and across Belgium, Holland, France. He has worn out this supply of men willing to live by discipline and die for promises.

The strength of the dying Nazi movement lies in their graves.

FURNITURE QUALITY IN WAR TIME

Some people take it for granted that everything has deteriorated in quality during the war . . . that is not so, we are repeatedly impressed by the way in which many of our manufacturers have managed to maintain their standards notwithstanding all wartime handicaps.

There is inferior furniture on the market, of course—there always was—and some makers have admittedly slipped during the war, usually because of inexperienced labor . . . substitute materials have been used too, but often they are equal in appearance and service to the materials they replace.

Good furniture is still being made by manufacturers who value their reputation—it with makers of this character that COPE'S has been consistently associated . . . the quantities they can ship us now are limited, but the quality remains HIGH!

Boardman, Inspired and Red-Hot, Defeats Quakers 53-49

Shooting Of Metz, Smith And Fletcher Too Much In Torrid Tournament Contest

A red-hot Boardman aggregation, capable of taking any outfit last night, heard Salem High's Quakers 53-49 at Youngstown South's field house before nearly 2,200 fans, thereby ending the tournament chances of one of the best Quaker cage teams in years.

Flashing an uncanny shooting ability in the first half, slipping slightly in the third, but rebounding to outscore Salem in the fourth, the victors displayed one of the "warmer" exhibitions so far in Class A play at Youngstown. Salem is the only seeded team eliminated at South.

Despite the fact that they were beaten, Salem could hardly be said to have played a poor game, as they went down fighting and showed one of the finest comeback sprees in the third frame that local fans have been treated to this year.

The victory moves Boardman into the district finals and into a battle against Canton Timken at 9 tonight. Youngstown South and Canton McKinley meet in the first game at 8.

The shooting odds were definitely stacked against the Quakers and it turned out to be one of those nights when the wrong team was getting the breaks. Boardman's firing clicked with precision during the first half and appeared top-notch again in the final, while Salem was able to hit the hoop with their usual stamina for only one frame—the third.

Stepping off to an 18-9 lead in the first frame, the winners increased the margin to 32-21 at halftime.

The spree was sparked by a dead-shot artist, Jim Metz, who threw them one handed 15 points over the court to mesh 15 points during the first half. He had 10 of Boardman's 18 in the first frame.

Trailing 11 points and looking like a rejuvenated club, Salem came back strong after the half on rapid-fire fast breaks and clever ball handling the Quakers collected 10 points before Boardman could score at all. With the score 34-31, after Metz clicked again, the Quakers, paced by Francis Lanney, who tallied twice from the floor, stepped into one of their two leads of the game, 37-36. Boardman jumped to the front seconds before the third ended and then a foul shot by Bob Payer tied it all up 38-38 as the third ended.

In the final Schaeffer and Wall Brian started Salem off well by making two fouls good and the Quakers led 40-38. Jardine got a double-header, Walter caged a foul and Boardman led again 43-40. Salem never regained the lead.

The play of Tony Smith, the only center to completely out-manuever Brian this season, was the standout in Boardman's show all evening. In spite of Metz's dreamlike shooting.

The hub of the smooth ball-handling, Smith had pivot, push-up and side-arm shots that just couldn't be stopped. He tallied 18 points and was the main cog in the Boardman upset.

Wilson Fletcher, a forward who had foul trouble and missed part of the fray, turned in a top-notch show also. Accounting for 10 points, he did some excellent rebounding and added plenty of scraps to the hard pressing defense that kept Salem on its heels most of the way.

For Salem the outstanding performance of the evening was that of Francis Lanney. The stalwart captain, who hasn't clicked too well all year, fought every record of the way and accounted for five buckets—as many as any other Quaker—and a foul for 11 points.

Lanney's ability to get in for shots was superb and he worked himself and other teammates into position time and time again.

Brian was high point man with 14 points, but his performance wasn't up to par. Although the high-coring Quaker put through his usual push-up shots with the same old ease and accuracy, he failed to get as many attempts and allowed Smith to out-manuever him on several occasions.

Scrappy Ray Kelly was out of the game most of the way after Coach Bob Miller inserted Freshman Payer to eliminate some of the height advantage Boardman seemed to have from the start.

Payer, playing his first full stretch of varsity ball, gave an excellent account of himself. Still green at the ball handling angle, the lanky youth was invaluable in rebounding under both boards and added a heap of ball-control to Salem's attack. His fighting spirit had the fans on their feet several times and his show gave promise of better things to come in Quaker basketball.

Jim Appedisan didn't break in to the lineup for more than three minutes in all, but he showed his usual scrappy ability in the final quarter. Besides meshing one bucket, diminutive Appedisan stole the ball from the leaders when getting the oval was the all-important project.

Norm Smith played his usual consistently good defensive game and was valuable for his ball-handling.

Poul shooting probably cost Salem the ball game as much as any phase of the foul line. Salem missed 10 more than enough to win. Boardman hit 11 of 16 fouls.

From the floor the winners out-did Salem by just one basket. Salem collected 20 field goals and Boardman 21.

One man, John Jardine, went out via the personal route. Officials Joe Check and Andy Lindsay

RETURNED WRITER FINDS PRO GOLFERS STILL SWINGING 'EM

William Boni, War Writer For Three Years, Has Scribbling Urge

Editor's Note: William F. Boni, an Associated Press sportswriter before he turned war correspondent a couple of years ago, is back in the United States for a brief rest. He went out to the Miami Springs municipal course to watch his old player-friends in action—and the old urge to write about what he saw overcame him. So War Correspondent Boni turns Sports Writer Boni for the day.)

MIAMI, Fla., March 10.—It is a very nice thing to come back after three years from the golfing scene and find Ben Hogan still in there whipping out crisp drives and iron shots and Sammy Snead still being the ball that proverbial country mile.

Of course, the picture isn't quite the same. Hogan is a lieutenant now, coaching and instructing the boys at an Army Air force hospital here, and Sammy is not long away from a hitch in the Navy.

Yet Sam came out of the Navy to win six out of the first 11 tournaments he played in. Hogan, who until just the other day had played no golf since September and hadn't been in a tournament for more than a year, teamed with P. O. A. President Ed Dudley to whip Jack Laffoon and Jack Groat, 8 and 7, in the first round of the four-ball invitation yesterday.

Reminders of Old Days. Ever so often Benny would uncover a shot every bit as good as the ones he put together in March of 1940 when he won three Carolina tournaments in as many weeks with a score some 27 strokes under par.

Because he did have streaks of looking so good and Dudley, at 43, was getting there with the occasional money shot when needed, their match today with Byron Nelson and Jack McSpaden promises to be the top event of the quarter-finals.

The other second-round matches, all at 36 holes, sent Chick Ruten and Claude Harmon against Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta, only former winners in the field; Snead and P. O. A. Champ Bob Hamilton against Craig Wood and Tony Penna, and Frank Strazma and Joe Zarhardt against Denny Shute and Sam Byrd.

Sport Chatter

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, March 10.—As an aftermath of the Brooklyn basketball scandal, bills have been introduced in the legislatures of New York, Massachusetts, California and Michigan—and maybe some other states—putting virtually all sports under control of state commissions.

Whether this would bring improvement is debatable, but the gambling "evil" never has been eliminated from commission-controlled boxing. Apparently it does not matter so much where control of sports is placed as how good a job is done by those who exercise control.

NO DOUBT AT ALL

FAIR "Red" Vickery, end on Georgia's 1942 Rose Bowl football team, went through three Pacific invasions with the Marines. At Saipan he was so badly injured a steel plate was used on one foot to enable him to walk.

While undergoing treatment, Red remarked: "Sure I'll play football again." Sgt. Johnny Schrover, 1942 Penn State freshman star, lost a leg at Anzio. While at England hospital, Atlantic City, learning to use an artificial limb before returning to college, Johnny wrote Coach Bob Higgins: "I don't know whether I'll be able to stand and watch the other fellows play, but I guess I had to stop playing sometime."

Old Mr. Upset Takes Hand In Ohio Basketball Scene

By HAROLD HARRISON, Associated Press Sports Writer

Mr. Upset—the fellow who delights in overturning Mr. Setup—stalked into Ohio's 1945 high school basketball tournament last night. The No. 1 victim of the sudden change in what had been peace and calm was Toledo Woodward, runner-up to Middletown for the 1944 Class A championship and winner of 18 straight games this season.

The Polar Bears ran into a defense they couldn't solve and took a 26 to 21 beating from Toledo Macomber in the district tournament at Toledo. Just to make it unanimous in the Toledo area, Libbey whipped a highly favored Scott team, 36 to 32.

Woodward, led by Bob Harrison and Paul Seymour from last year's team, nursed a scant edge over Macomber until the final quarter. The Bears were ahead, 8 to 6, at the half, and 19 to 16 at the three quarter mark in a game which proved that sometimes a good defense will win basketball games.

Woodward had beaten Macomber twice during the regular season. The upsets also hit the class B competition as Philo, beaten only once all season, took a 39 to 32 trimming from Strasburg in the district meet at Zanesville.

Philo was one of the four finalists in last year's class B state tournament and the defeat of the Electric made certain an entire new cast for this year class B finals. Akron Elliot, the 1944 champion, Worthington and Lima St. John previously had been eliminated.

Strasburg led all the way against the Electrics, the quarter post scores being 8 to 6, 19 to 15, 33 to 21 and the final 39 to 32.

Woodward Drops. The defeat of Toledo Woodward left only two unbeaten teams in the class A competition and only two of last year's final tournament teams still looking for the 1945 title. Middletown and Bellevue are the unbeaten teams. Bellevue got past Norwalk last night, 37 to 31. Middletown did not play.

Martins Ferry and Middletown are the only class A 1944 finalists still in the running.

One of the three class B teams still unbeaten also advanced last night. That was average 60-point-a-game Farmer, which won from Hicksville, 36 to 33. Farmer will meet Pettisville tonight for the right to go on to the regionals.

The other unbeaten class B teams are Columbiana and Ashville. Class B teams which moved into the regionals last night were once-beaten Williams, which whipped Buckland, 52 to 40, and Sandusky St. Mary, which nosed out Luckey, 45 to 42.

Canton Timken, one of the red hot favorites for the class A crown, also moved along another step in district competition by beating Youngstown East, 48 to 32. Timken has lost only to Canton McKinley this season. They won't meet in district play but both can go into the regional tournaments.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

many of our fighting forces now are in Europe will have to continue in service until the job is done in the Orient. That's not a happy thought, but it's best that we get it firmly in mind, and for two reasons: To save ourselves disappointment, and to ensure that the war in the Pacific gets every ounce of our support.

Japan presents a danger potentially as great as the threat of enslavement held over Europe by Hitler.

The Japs are imbued with all the aggression and brutality of Prussianism, plus barbarism. They have made it quite clear that their scheme is to bring all Asia under their domination and set it against the western world.

We know from well-informed sources that already the Japs—admitting to themselves the probability of their defeat in the present war—are planning another attack on America 25 years hence. They would profit by their military lessons in the present conflict.

The Japanese militarists must follow the Prussians out. This means we must be prepared to see many of our soldiers reasigned to the Pacific theatre after they've finished in Germany. Some of them will go directly from Europe. We shall ship some supplies from Europe also. We must accept this ungrudgingly and then back our fighting forces with everything they need.

How long will the Pacific war last? Don't let anybody tell you he can answer that, because he can't. Japan is badly hurt by her shipping and naval losses, and by being largely cut off from essential supplies by blockade. Many observers believe that, once the full weight of Allied power is thrown against them, the Mikado's forces may quit a lot sooner than originally was anticipated. But we've got to hit them with everything we have to keep the war from being a long one.

NEW YORK, March 10—The stock market today shook off the lull of March with considerable success and leading rails and industrials recovered fractions to 2 points of recent losses.

Dealings were unimpressive. While advances were well maintained in the majority of cases near the close, scattered minus signs were in evidence. Transfers for the two hours ran to around 700,000 shares.

The feigning the list had been oversold in the sharp two-session jump apparently inspired some bidding. Ahead most of the time were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, International Telephone (divided at a new 1944-45 top), Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Western Union "A", Westinghouse, U. S. Rubber, DuPont, Union Carbide and Eastman Kodak.

Resistant were Boeing, Texas Co., Owens-Illinois and International Harvester.

SUSPECT CONVICT OF MURDERING 3 WOMEN

WASHINGTON, March 10—Police are hunting a handsome escaped convict to ask what he knows about the deaths of three women in three cities.

Detective Chief Robert J. Barrett said he will swear out a warrant today against Joseph Medley, 42, charging he killed well-to-do Mrs. Nancy Boyer, 45, who was shot Tuesday morning.

Barrett added that Medley also is wanted for questioning concerning the deaths of two women whose nude bodies were found in hotel bathtubs in Chicago and New Orleans.

On Feb. 28 Medley met a young Washington woman who took him home to meet her mother and introduced him to her friends, Barrett told newsmen last night.

In this way Medley got to know Mrs. Boyer.

Barrett said the young woman who first met him, her mother and others had examined pictures of Medley and are positive he is the man.

Robbery evidently was the motive, Barrett added.
